In a bid to stop crime, a Texas city wants to put tiny cameras in the bathroom stalls in public restrooms. Now, city officials want to put the cameras up along county roads in rural areas, to watch for stolen vehicles. The cameras would be as tiny as 2mm wide and high. At that size, the cameras would be only about the size of a match book. The Texas A&M University Technology Transfer Company (TTTC) plans to manufacture the cameras at a cost of about $2 a piece. According to The Dallas Morning News, the cameras will be mounted on roadside poles at locations where burglaries are common. The TTTC is also developing a portable version of the cameras to be used by police and paramedics. The tiny cameras are said to be useful in fighting the increasing amount of auto theft across the state of Texas. The portable version of the cameras will be carried by emergency response vehicles, so they could be used to track down stolen vehicles.

Q: WordPress - Sort Posts on Category I have a series of Categories, and on one of those categories I have several posts. Now I want to add something to the WordPress menu that will show only those posts in the category that I selected. I hope that makes sense. Thanks, A: There is a dedicated plugin for that : WordPress Menu Filter The plugin is ideal for any menu filter that requires only one input filter to set. The plugin provides a one-input dropdown menu filter that can be added to a menu link, category or tag with just one click. Check here for more info and documentation.
