Horseradish peroxidase (HRP) is a plant peroxidase with great biotechnological potential. In this study, we aimed to use HRP as a linker between short ssDNA molecules and an electrode. We investigated (1) whether HRP remains bound to ssDNA after hybridization, (2) whether HRP retains its affinity for a modified ssDNA, and (3) whether the affinity decreases with the length of the ssDNA. The ssDNA was directly immobilized to an electrode surface and hybridized with a target DNA labeled with a redox probe and HRP. The hybridization signal gradually decreased with the length
