What's new in Cube Life: Island Survival:

I have decided to make an all-new mod for BF3, just like how everyone here got modded. Every gamer should be allowed to mod, afterall, it only benefits the entire gaming community. We offer PS3, XBOX 360 and PC 360 compatibility. Feel free to do requests or make suggestions if you want something added. When I reference BF3, I don't mean the console version since my mod will work on future patches of the PC version as well. We have a build thread and a testing thread linked below. We also have a little we call "Stuff will need to be done for the Mod". Current features: Logging: True to BF3, I would like to set up this feature as a beta for the mod, so more advanced features will not be added yet, who knows, maybe by this time next year I will have even more advanced features implemented. Hall of Fame: This feature will be coded up shortly (we have a limited amount of time right now). Grip System: This is a rumoured mod, it never got verified as of this moment. Export Imports: Current DLCs you are importing from the console will be exported as they are, you will not have to import and re-build any Imports. It is not quite obvious yet, since we haven't implemented the feature yet. Description Edit: Just like the PC 360 version, we want to have modders be able to change the game's difficulty in a format that will not impact our mod (all of the PC 360 version capabilities). Sounds: Matchmaking: This is a known bug, but we have not implemented a fix for the time being. Biotic Phase: This is meant as an alternative Biotic Phase. We wanted something that is changing our approach from the normally used plan on the PC 360 version. About 18 months ago, the Medic called me and told me that they had been working on this concept since the release of BF3. Thanks to our medic for doing this! Logo: For our thread. We use the modded "Game information provider" trailer to explain what we are modding in an easy to understand format. "Sniping is the ultimate team sport. I play it as an object, not my friend." Since there is going to be

The use of pH-sensitive nanocarriers to control the drug release, consequently enhancing the therapeutic index of quinine sulfate on Schistosoma mansoni-infected mice. Quinine sulfate is the first line drug for treatment of hepatic and intestinal schistosomiasis. However, its effectiveness is strongly compromised by a high plasma concentration of this drug, which is related to the fast and complete hydrolysis of quinine sulfate in plasma. The resulting free quinine has detrimental effects on parasite infection. In this way, a strategy involving nanocarriers for releasing quinine during the acute phase of infection and inhibiting its hydrolysis is likely to present a better control of helminthic parasites. Herein, we synthesized quinine sulfate-loaded liposomes, chitosan nanoparticles and micelles by thin film hydration method followed by freeze-drying. In our in vitro and in vivo studies, liposomes had a more sustained-release behavior (pH-dependent) than liposomes, chitosan micelles or nanoparticles. The efficiency of quinine release, in plasma and inside the organism, was correlated with the total drug-carrying capacity of quinine-loaded nanocarriers. In mice infected with S. mansoni, only quinine-loaded liposomes and chitosan nanoparticles were able to induce parasite mortality rates higher than the pure drug. These results suggest that chitosan nanoparticles and liposomes are good candidates for encaps
